Created in 1988, docomomo international is a non-profit organization devoted to the DOocumentation and COnservation of the buildings, sites and neighborhoods of the MOdern MOvement. Through its numerous activities, docomomo aims to foster projects and research on modern architecture, bring its significance to the attention of the public, promote the surveying and documentation of twentieth century architectural heritage, encourage the development of appropriate techniques and methods of conservation, and oppose destruction and disfigurement of significant works.

Since its creation, the organization has established itself as a major partner not only in the realms of documentation and conservation, but also in the broader field of architectural culture. Its pluralist, interdisciplinary dimension, which has brought together historians, architects, town-planners, landscape architects, preservationists, students, professors and public officials, is a strong asset.

At present, it includes seventy national and regional chapters and more than 2000 members worldwide.

Network: docomomo International coordinates the actions of all regional and national chapters; fosters public relations worldwide and assists UNESCO, the World Heritage Centre, ICOMOS, UIA and other organizations in compiling a list of cultural properties to be protected.

Publications: docomomo International publishes a biannual journal, the Docomomo Journal which is currently the only international periodical devoted to recent research on the modern movement. It also promotes the circulation of all publications concerned with the heritage of the modern movement, issues a series of technical dossiers and publishes the proceedings of the biannual

Conferences and Seminars: docomomo International organizes international conferences on specific aspects of the modern movement namely technical aspects of the modern architecture preservation and contributes to conferences and scientific venues.

Organization: docomomo International keeps bureaucracy to a minimum. Within the organization, an elected Executive Committee ensures that agreed policies are implemented and plans biannual conferences. National chapters provide a forum for discussion and the exchange of information and develop their own local plans of actions. Several International Specialist Committees (ISCs), composed of internationally recognized experts, fulfill the need to gather expertise and regularly organize technical seminars. They work on the establishment of an international inventory of buildings and sites of the modern movement and they develop programs on modern technology, urbanism, landscape, education and theory.

Membership: Several categories of docomomo membership are offered. Membership entitles the member to receive free copies of the docomomo Journal, discounts on publications, invitations to participate in conferences and mostly to be part of docomomo network. For further information concerning membership applications consult www.docomomo.com

Chair: Ana Tostões. Architect, architecture historian and chair of docomomo International. She is associate professor with habilitation at the Civil Engineering and Architecture Department of the IST, Lisbon University, where she is coordinator of the Phd program in Architecture and is in charge of the modern architectural history and theory disciplines.

Her research field is the history of architecture and the city of the twentieth century, in which she develops an operative view, oriented towards the conservation and re-use of modern architecture, focusing especially on post-war architectural culture and relations between European, African and American modernity. On these topics she has published books and scientific articles and curate several exhibitions. In 2006 the President of the Portuguese Republic awarded her the honorary title of Commander of the Ordem do Infante D. Henrique in recognition of her contribution to the dissemination of knowledge about architecture.

Secretary General: Zara Ferreira, architect (IST, 2012). She made her professional traineeship as researcher under the scope of the FCT project "EWV_Exchanging Worlds Visions: modern architecture in Lusophone Africa (1943-1974) Brazilian experience looking through established since the 1930s". Since then she has been collaborating with docomomo International and with the architecture office Tetractys Arquitectos. She is also currently working for the Portuguese Official Representation at the 14th Biennale Architettura.
